MULES, COWS AND HORSES BURNED

Large Barn Fire Near York Springs Consumes Several Buildings with Stock and Implements. Buildings Insured. Contents Total Loss.

In a fire of unknown origin at midnight Saturday the barn on the farm of Steven S. Frazier, about one mile west of York Springs on the Idaville road, burned to the ground together with the hog pen and a large straw stack. Two mules, two horses and four cows also perished in the flames.

The farm, which is known as the old Jonathan Miller farm, is owned by Steven S. Frazier who moved to York about ten days ago. The place is tenanted by Parvin Bowers who had no insurance on the contents of the barn.

Mr. Bowers and family had gone to bed about eleven o'clock Saturday night and were sound asleep when the fire was discovered by neighbors who rushed to the place and, after a great deal of difficulty, awakened them. The barn by this time, was burning rapidly and nothing could be got out. The hogs and chickens were got to a place of safety but the barn with all its contents burned.

In the barn, besides the stock, were farming implements, wagons, harness, a quantity of hay and other grain, while a large straw stack outside was quickly consumed. The hog pen also burned but hard work saved the other buildings.

The scene of the fire was visited by hundreds of people on Sunday who traveled to the scene of the destructive blaze.

COUNTY FRUIT BELT REPORT

Fruit Trees are Far Advanced. Buds Bursting. Everything Pointing to Big Crop of Various Fruits. Busy Spraying.

Reports from the Adams County fruit belt state that the almost unprecedented warm March weather has resulted in most unusual conditions for the first of April. Plum trees are in full bloom, peach and cherry buds are almost ready to burst and early apple trees are rapidly coming into leaf. Apple trees, especially the young ones, are full of buds and these, too, are very far advanced for the season.

Fruit men are torn between conflicting emotions: a profusion of buds promising a bounteous crop and the fear that there may yet come severe freezing weather to blast their hopes. Some growers who counted on the first two weeks of April for their scale spraying are afraid to proceed for fear of injuring the young leaves. The wise ones, however, are going right ahead realizing that a little burning of foliage will be much less serious than trees unprotected from scale.

Not in many years has there been so much farm work done during March. Many farmers have finished spring plowing. Tyson Brothers, at Flora Dale, have planted twelve acres of potatoes and about five acres of early cabbage.

GERMANY TOWNSHIP

Ash Grove, April 4—Ash Grove school closed on Tuesday, March 22. Average attendance 81; per cent. of attendance 88. Those who attended every day during the term were, Uima Bair, Myrtle Harner, Regina Eckenrode, Mervin Witrode, teacher.

Bachman into house vacated by Mr. Sheely.

RYE HEADS IN MARCH

An old saying prevalent among farmers and weather wise folk generally, as an indication that weather conditions are favorable for good crops, is that "April ought to show rye heads to May." This condition has been totally eclipsed during the remarkable month of March, for a well developed head of rye comes from the farm of John Messersmith, Paradise township, York County, tenanted by Martin Barnhart. This is probably the earliest rye head ever developed in this section of the country; at least all declare they have never before heard of such precocity in that line of agricultural achievement.

MONSTER WILD CAT

William Green, Cascade caught a wild cat measuring six feet from the end of its nose to the tip of its tail. This cat is said to have been prowling around Cascade for 14 years, carrying off chickens.

Mr. Green set a No. 3 steel trap near his house at night. A live chicken was used for bait. Mr. Green was greeted on awakening next morning by the unearthly shrieks of the captive cat. He hastened to the trap and here found the cat fast by the left front leg. He leveled his shot gun at him and fired, the charge entering the animal's head.

The animal is the largest caught for some time. The pelt was shipped to Corry, to the Corry Hide and Fur Co. Christian Shockey, Noah Green and T. H. Wastler, neighbors, who had suffered from the cat's depredations made up a purse of $15, each contributing one third of the amount as a token of their appreciation of Mr. Green's service.

SEVERAL RAINY DAYS PROMISED

Weather Bureau Promises that Drought shall be broken. Pleasant News to Adams County Farmers.

Adams County farmers and all others who are affected in one way or another by wet or dry weather will welcome the following dispatch from Washington:

"Rains will be general throughout the United States during the present week. During the first half of the week, according to the prediction of the Weather Bureau, an extensive barometric depression will cross the central valley, the Lake region and the Atlantic seaboard, attended by rains."

The closing paragraph of the dispatch, however, is not so pleasant reading to Adams Countians. It is as follows:

"The rain area will be followed by a sharp fall in temperature, which will carry the frost line to or somewhat below the fortieth parallel."

For the past few weeks the farmers have been seriously worried by the drought. Wells were rapidly going dry again, wheat was showing the effects of lack of moisture, and matters looked decidedly bad until the rainfall started on Sunday.

Not in many years have the rural people been up against a drought in March and April. Summer droughts have always been more or less frequent but a scarcity of water at this time of the year has been practically unknown. The winter saw the usual amount of precipitation, it is said, but owing to the frozen condition of the fields little got for below the surface and the ground had no reserve on which to draw in case of a long spell of dry weather.

The promised relief is most welcome provided the fall in temperature does not follow for buds are far advanced, as will be noted in the report from the fruit belt contained in another column, and the crop would be greatly damaged by heavy frost.

WHITE RUN

White Run, April 4—Many people changed their place of residence the past week. Charles Bucher and family were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bucher, of Alloways.

Alma McIntire, of New Chester, returned home after spending several weeks with her sister, Mrs. Harvey Little.

There will be Sunday school at Grace Church, Two Taverns, next Sunday morning at 9 o'clock. Preaching at 10 and Christian Endeavor at 7 o'clock in the evening.

CURE FOR PEACH YELLOWS

State Economic Zoologist H. A. Surface is confident that before the end of this year he will be able to announce a cure for the "peach yellows," a hitherto incurable disease of peach trees. So serious is this ailment regarded that the law requires the complete destruction of all trees affected with it. Professor Surface has been conducting experiments at his farm near Mechanicsburg and believes he has mastered the disease. While not prepared as yet to announce his discovery, he says that "dehorning," or cutting back, and liberal fertilizing are parts of the treatment.

CALL OF THE WILD

The presentation of "Call of the Wild" with Franklin Woodruff the emotional actor which, is underlined to be here tonight, and which is awaited with considerable interest, will be notable for several reasons. In the first place the presentation will make known Mr. Woodruff in his portrayal of John Ermine of the Yellowstone, the scout, a part with good emotion, the suiting of him. Proof of this is furnished by the many newspaper comments received throughout the country. He has created many parts in plays which have won fame for him, but in this play he is at his best. SKELLY & WARNER

PLAYED OWN DEATH MARCH

Musician Falls Dead In Funeral Procession of His Chum.

Evansville, Ind., April 4.—Despite the protest of his wife, James Debar, a tuba player, sixty-four years old, who had been ill, insisted upon rising from his bed to play in the band that the Musician's union had organized in honor of the funeral of a fellow musician, Jacob Bauer. Debar and Bauer had been lifelong friends. In funeral processions and at public festivals for years they had marched and played together.

"Miss playing the funeral march for the man that was a brother to me?" exclaimed Debar to his wife. "Not if I fall in my tracks."

His wife helped him on with his uniform, and he hooked the strap of his big tuba over his shoulders and walked rather shakily to the place of formation of the funeral cortege.

Before the procession had gone two blocks, Debar, blowing vigorously into his tuba, dropped dead in front of the hearse.

MOODY'S AILMENT

Supreme Court Justice Is Suffering With Stomach Trouble.

Boston, April 4.—For the first time since he was taken ill, it is now learned that the real ailment which afflicts Justice William H. Moody, of the United States supreme court, is a stomach trouble, a nausea so long continued that it has become chronic.

Mr. Moody is at the Corey Hill hospital in Brookline.

It has been reported that Mr. Moody was afflicted with rheumatism. This is true, but rheumatism is not the cause of his present serious condition. He has suffered from rheumatism since early manhood.

WOMAN KILLS MAN IN CIGAR STORE

"He Wanted a Scrap," Little Shopkeeper Says.

Wilmington, Del., April 4.—Cornelia Borelli, twenty-six years old, shot and killed Andrew Nordin, a young rigger of Bloomington, Ill., employed here on the new gas tank under construction by the Wilmington Gas company, in a cigar store conducted by the woman on East Second street. "He wanted a scrap," said the woman when the police came to arrest her, "and I shot him. Yes, I killed him. No one can fight in here," she said.

According to witnesses, Nordin, with John Kapanski, a fellow workman, went into the cigar store for the purpose of purchasing a package of cigarettes. While making the purchase Nordin began talking to the Borelli woman. While they were engaged in conversation, another man, believed to have been Romano Karnell, entered and engaged in a quarrel with Nordin. It was while they were struggling about the room that the Borelli woman, according to Kapanski, reached under the counter and securing a revolver, fired two shots.

Kapanski fled, but returned with the police, who found Nordin's dead body lying on the floor with a bullet hole through the head and the woman standing behind the counter.

Karnell and Kapanski have been placed under arrest and are being held as witnesses. Nordin's body is at the morgue.

CHEER TAFT'S LABOR VIEWS

Believes in Right of Workingmen to Organize.

FAIR PLAY FOR ALL

Declares Labor Unions Are Necessary In Order That Workingmen Be Upon an Equality With Employers—Defends Injunction Bill.

Washington, April 4.—The Taft administration is about to defend itself aggressively before the people of the United States. Convinced that the public mind has been impressed by attacks of various kinds upon the administration in many parts of the country, and that the criticisms cannot be permitted to pass unanswered without injury to Republican prestige, the party leaders have decided to "carry the war into the enemy's country."

President Taft is now declared to be ready and anxious to assume the offensive, and the opening guns will be fired next Saturday night, in Washington by the president in person, and in Chicago by Attorney General Wick ersham. Mr. Taft will speak in this city on the subject of organization, and he will be supported by other powerful orators of the Republican party. Attorney General Wick's subject will be the policies of the administration.

Nothing has created so much interest among the Republican leaders in Washington since the inauguration of Mr. Taft as the plans now formulating to defend the administration. Some facts are to be brought out about the operation of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, and the enemies of that legislation will be called upon to answer the friends of the administration with some concrete evidence if this subject is to continue as an issue within the party.

Legislation Expected

The party, it is said, expects confidently to close the session of congress with interstate commerce, statehood, postal savings, anti-injunction and conservation legislation to its credit. In addition, it is hoped that a statement may be issued showing that a very great saving has been made in the expense of carrying on the governmental business.

Little is being said by the party leaders about the issue of "Cannonism," beyond the statement that this question will take care of itself at the right time. The only explanation vouchsafed for this comment is that Speaker Cannon is expected to resign the speakership at the close of the present session of congress.

Talking of Cannon's Successor

Should the speaker thus resign at the close of the present session at a time when there would be no opportunity to choose his successor before next winter, it is argued that several members of the present house would benefit by immediately announcing themselves as candidates.

No official statement on this subject is expected from the speaker. His friends believe that it would be inadvisable for him to weaken the organization of the house at this time by disclosing his intentions. They argue that in view of the recent battle in the house all the force that was retained by the Republican majority is needed if the administration program as to legislation is to succeed.

There are rumors circulated with considerable freedom about the capitol that before the congressional elections some changes may be expected in the president's cabinet, but none of these stories can be confirmed. In fact, no one professes to have any first-hand information on the subject. At the same time the general impression seems to be that an effort will be made to strengthen the cabinet in a political way.

A WEALTHY BURGLAR

Eddie Fay, Who Looted Richmond, Va., Postoffice, Worth a Million.

New York, April 4.—Eddie Fay, alias Fred Cunningham, of London, England, who was arrested in this city with Frank Chester, of St. Paul, Minn., for robbing the Richmond, Va., postoffice of about $90,000 worth of cash and stamps, is a millionaire.

Fay owns considerable real estate in England and maintains a racing stable of thoroughbreds valued at $450,000. For years he has been a burglar and is wanted in many parts of the country. Rewards aggregating $20,000 have been offered for his capture. About $70,000 worth of the stamps stolen at Richmond have been recovered.

HUNDREDS DIE AT MAD MULLAH'S HANDS

Kills Tribesmen and Destroys Many Villages.

Aden, Arabia, April 4.—The ferocious campaign of Mohammed Abdullah, of Somaliland, "The Mad Mullah," against the Sultanates under English protection, continues unchecked.

Hundred of the tribesmen friendly to the sultanates have been slaughtered, vast areas laid waste and towns razed. Natives in great numbers are fleeing to the coast.

It is expected here that this will lead to another expedition against "The Mad Mullah," who has caused the British government great anxiety for many years.

COW BREAKS DAIRY RECORD

Gives 560 Pounds of Milk and 29 Pounds of Butter in Week.

Utica, N. Y., April 4.—A test has recently been conducted by the state agricultural department with a Holstein cow that is just a few days less than three years old, and is owned by E. La Munion, of Solville, Madison county.

In seven days the cow averaged more than 80 pounds of milk a day, and from this was made more than twenty-nine pounds of butter, which is said to be the world's record for a cow of her age. Cornell Agriculture college had a representative constantly present during the test.

Potatoes So Low Cattle Get Them

Titusville, Pa., April 4.—The slump in the price of potatoes, which is general in the country, has hit this community, and persons who paid 65 cents a bushel last fall can now purchase all they want at 25 cents. Great stocks of potatoes, which were held during the winter, are now being dumped on the market, and some farmers are feeding them to their cattle.

Taft Keeps Hands Off in West Virginia

Washington, April 4.—The West Virginia partisans of both Senator Nathan B. Scott, who is a candidate for re-election, and of Representative Hubbard, who wishes to replace him, have quoted President Taft as favoring their candidate. The West Virginia fight is a very hot one, but the president is not taking sides.

Nervous Prostration

"I suffered so with Nervous Prostration that I thought there was no use trying to get well. A friend recommended Dr. Miles' Nerve, and although skeptical at first, I soon found myself recovering, and am to-day well."

MRS. D. I. JONES,
5800 Broadway, Cleveland, O.

Much sickness is of nervous origin. It's the nerves that make the heart force the blood through the veins, the lungs take in oxygen, the stomach digest food, the liver secrete bile and the kidneys filter the blood. If any of these organs are weak, it is the fault of the nerves through which they get their strength. Dr. Miles' Nerve is a specific for the nerves. It soothes the irritation and assists in the generation of nerve force. Therefore you can hardly miss it if you take Dr. Miles' Nerve when sick. Get a bottle from your druggist. Take it all according to directions, and if it does not benefit he will return your money.

A COUNTERFEIT QUARTER

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1903, by Associated Literary Press.

Deacon Wrenn, widower, hesitated between two women, Miss Brown, a spinster of forty, who owned a house and lot, and the widow Norman, about the same age as Miss Brown, who owned a farm.

One day the deacon got stuck on a counterfeit quarter. The next time a tin peddler came along he offered it to the man in change.

"Don't look right, deacon."

"Oh, I guess it's all right," was the reply.

"Lots of counterfeit around."

"You needn't be afraid of that."

It wasn't a square thing to do, the deacon knew it, and the peddler knew it. The peddler pocketed the coin and went away, but he made up his mind to get even. At the next house he stopped at he was told that the deacon was hanging out between the widow and the spinster, and he thought he saw his way clear. Three days later he returned and halted on the road opposite to where the farmer was hoeing corn. The deacon came walking out to the fence to say:

"Being you accepted that quarter you'll have to keep it."

"Oh, it isn't about the quarter. I just wanted to tell you a bit of news. You know the old maid Brown in the village, don't you?"

"Seems to me I've heard of her," replied the deacon in his cautious way.

"Well, an uncle of hers in California has died and left her $15,000 cash. She's keeping it mighty quiet. She wants some one to marry her for love instead of money."

Half an hour later the deacon was hitching up to drive to the village. Two hours later he was saying to the blushing old maid:

"Sarah, I'm alone and lonely. I've concluded to take another wife. Will you have me?"

Sarah could have said "Yes" in a second, but Sarah was no spring chicken. She also weighed and balanced things. She'd said "Yes" to two different men before, but with no witnesses present, and they had left her all forlorn. Therefore she replied:

"Deacon, I respect and admire you and believe you to be a sincere man. Think of this matter on your way home and then write me a letter."

The deacon jogged home and took his pen in hand and wrote. He didn't wait for the mail, but sent his message to the village by his hired man. It was straight talk, and the written answer was "Yes."

Four days had passed when the peddler appeared again. Deacon Wrenn was out in the woodshed dyeing his whiskers. As for hair, he was so nearly baldheaded that it wouldn't pay to fool with. He suspended operations to hear the peddler say:

"Another bit of news for you, old man, and you mustn't give it away. You've heard of the Widder Norman, mebbe?"

"Yes, kinder heard."

"Got five children and never hoped to find a stepfather for 'em, but this is a world of change. It seems she had a brother in New England who hadn't been heard of in twenty years. Well, he turned up his toes the other day and left her $30,000 in cold cash. She's keeping still about it. There's a windmill man making eyes at her, but she won't let on until she knows he loves her for herself and her five sore eyed young uns. Don't breathe a hint to put him on to the dough."

The Scrap Book

A Good Shot.

Bill Jones was an eccentric character, a local justice of the peace in a South Carolina town. He was exceedingly tall—so attenuated, in fact, that but for his hat he would not have cast a shadow. One night a number of fellow bon vivants joined him in a symposium, and many minijuleps were consumed. One of the party unsteadily produced a revolver. It was accidentally discharged, and a bullet struck Bill Jones in the leg.

Conscience stricken and wabbly with excitement and juleps, the owner of the weapon hastened to the home of the nearest doctor and pulled the door-bell.

At length the physician, who had himself been spending a riotous evening, stuck his head from the second story window.

"Whazza nazzar?" he demanded thickly.

"I jush shot Bill Jones in the leg," replied the man below.

"Shot Bill Jones in the leg?" repeated the doctor wonderingly.

"Thash wha' I shaid," returned the offender—"shot Bill Jones in the leg."

The doctor gazed down upon him admiringly.

"Well," he said, "that wash a hell of a good shot."

And he closed the window and went back to bed.

TAFT TO DEFEND HIS POLICIES

Preparing to Carry War Into the Enemy's Country.

TO ANSWER CRITICISMS

Opening Gun: Will Be Fired Next Saturday Night by Mr. Taft in Washington and Attorney General Wickersham in Chicago—Some Legislation Expected.

Worcester, Mass., April 4.—President Taft defined his railroad policies in a speech in Mechanics hall before an audience of several thousand railway trainmen, who were attending a joint convention of the brotherhoods in train service, which has been in session here for several days. Mr. Taft spoke for an hour and discussed freely the union labor situation and the pending legislation in congress affecting railroad men. Labor organizations, he said, were necessary, and he was in favor of them. Organization is necessary, he continued, among railroad employees in order that they may be upon an equality with their employers. Mr. Taft also defended the injunction as an equitable remedy against unlawful injury, but, he added that not only he, but his predecessor, Theodore Roosevelt, as well believed that the power to issue injunctions should be limited so that injunctions should not be issued except upon proper grounds.

Roosevelt's Name Cheered.

The audience cheered when Colonel Roosevelt's name was mentioned.

The administration's injunction bill now pending in congress, he said, is a good bill and should be enacted. The president declared that he stood with the members of the railway trainmen's union in opposing the boycott and sympathetic strikes. He admitted that he did not know whether or not congress will enact his anti-injunction bill. But, he added, there are two good reasons why it should be passed. One was that it was promised by the Republican party in its last national platform, and the other was that the measure was a step in the right direction.

After speaking of issuing injunctions, the president said:

"Then there grew out of four or five instances where there was an ill-advised issuing of an injunction with out notice, a feeling that had wrought injustice, and I believe, and my predecessor, Theodore Roosevelt, believed that that power ought to be defined and limited in such a way that there was to be in the future no danger of ill-advised issuing of such injunctions. We have got a bill of that sort in congress. My friend, and quondam enemy, Brother Gompers, says it is no good at all. My embarrassing friend, Van Cleave, says it is very vicious. And they are at the two poles, which, my dear friends, is one of the best evidences that I have that the bill is a good thing."

"What the bill proposes to do is to say that when a man applies to a court for a restraining order he shall bring in his affidavits and make his case; that the court shall then write out in the minutes of the court why the injury threatened is irreparable; that he finds it to be sustained by evidence and why he cannot give notice and have the case tried before he issues the injunction. He has to spread that out on the minutes. When a judge has to do that he is going to think twice before he issues an order without giving the other side an opportunity to be heard."

"Secondly, if he concludes that he finds the reason, in the evidence before him and he issues the order, the order is no good if the other side is not notified and if the hearing is not had, after seven days it ceases to have effect altogether. That is to prevent some abuses that we know of in the past where a preliminary order was issued without notice and lasted three months."

Mr. Taft took a shot at insurgents in congress who are opposing his program of legislation because of the fact that he conferred with railway presidents before framing the measure.

Railroad President's Rights.

The president again was cheered when he said he was not afraid to consult railroad presidents when railroad legislation came up for consideration at Washington, despite the criticism that had been made of his course.

"If there is one thing I hate," he declared, with emphasis, "it is sham, hypocrisy and fraud in representing a virtue when it does not exist. I believe in being fair to all."

President W. C. Brown, of the New York Central; President C. S. Mellen, of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, and President Lucius Tuttle, of the Boston & Maine railroad, all listened to President Taft with interest. They also made brief speeches to the trainmen.

During the morning the president spent several hours at Millbury, where he visited his aunt, Miss Della C. Torrey. He crossed the Blackstone river, where he used to go in swimming. He went to divine service at the Second Congregational church, accompanied by Miss Torrey, Horace D. Taft, his brother, and Captain Butt. After church the president returned to the Torrey residence for dinner.

For the proper protection of the hives of bees it is well to put them where they will be protected from extremes of cold in winter, but we have in mind one swarm of bees that have headquarters in an old hollow oak tree for four consecutive seasons and that during their period of hibernation must have been subjected to temperatures of 20 to 25 degrees below zero. Whether they finally died of old age, froze to death or sought warmer quarters we never knew.

CARNEGIE GREETED COUSINS

Family Reunion Marks the Laird's Sunday at Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, April 4.—Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie welcomed nearly two-score relatives at an informal family reception. Later the entire party attended the 1041st free organ recital in Carnegie Music hall nearby.

Mr. Charles Helmer, director of music at the institute, entertained the large audience with the work of masters, but an extra—"Auld Lang Syne"—was most appreciated. It brought the little Laird of Skibo to his feet, and, beaming with smiles, he joined hands with the family.

He appeared to enjoy the day immensely and in a short address at the recital he declared the musical treat capped the climax of an extraordinarily pleasant visit to Pittsburgh. He preached a little sermon on "Brotherhood," and in conclusion said: "The best preparation for an afterlife is to live this one well."

His vigorous gestures, his keen appreciation of things and frequent smiles were enough to refute the reports of his ill health. He led all his relatives back to the hotel and had them in for tea.

The party included four first cousins, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Morris and Mrs. Thomas McKenna, of Pittsburgh, and Miss Myra Hogan, of Philadelphia. The others were also cousins.

ROOSEVELT WILL NOT MEET THE POPE

His Audience With the Holy Father Cancelled.

Rome, April 4.—It is on European soil that, for the first time in his world-famous tour, Colonel Roosevelt has met with disappointment. It was thought that he would see his meeting with King Victor Emmanuel and the following day his meeting with the pope.

He will see the king and dine with him, but Roosevelt will not see the pope. Perhaps a more exact way of putting it would be to say the pope will not see Roosevelt.

As soon as Colonel Roosevelt left the jungle at Gondokoro in February he wrote to Ambassador Leishman at Rome, saying that he would be glad of the honor of a presentation to his holiness. At Cairo he received a dispatch from Mr. Leishman, as follows:

"Rome, March 23.—The rector of the American Catholic college, Bishop Kennedy, in reply to an inquiry which I caused to be made, requests that the following communication be transmitted to you. It begins: 'The holy father will be delighted to grant an audience to Mr. Roosevelt on April 5, and hopes that nothing will arise to prevent it, such as the much regretted incident which made the reception of Mr. Fairbanks impossible.'"

Mr. Roosevelt replied as follows: "Please present the following to Bishop Kennedy: 'It would be a real pleasure to me to be presented to the holy father, for whom I entertain high respect, both personally and as the head of a great church. I fully recognize his entire right to receive or not receive whomsoever he chooses for any reason that seems good to him, and if he does not receive me I shall not for a moment question the propriety of his action. On the other hand, I, in my turn, must decline to make any stipulation or submit to any conditions which would in any way limit my freedom of conduct. I trust that on April 5 he will find it convenient to receive me.'"

This reply was communicated to the Vatican, and Bishop Kennedy was instructed to send the following communication: "His holiness would be much pleased to grant an audience to Mr. Roosevelt, for whom he entertains high esteem, both personally and as a former president of the United States. His holiness recognizes Mr. Roosevelt's entire right to full freedom of conduct. On the other hand, in view of circumstances for which neither his holiness nor Mr. Roosevelt is responsible, an audience could not take place except on the understanding expressed in the former message."

Mr. Leishman telegraphed this to Mr. Roosevelt at Cairo, and the latter telegraphed to the ambassador: "The proposed presentation is, of course, now impossible."

HUSTON TRIAL TODAY

Case Against Capitol Architect Starts After Three Postponements.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 4.—The trial of Joseph M. Huston, architect of the capitol, on the charge of conspiring to defraud the state, began this morning, after being three times postponed in the course of a year. The trial will be long and bitterly contested, since the commonwealth will go into many transactions to prove its contention that Huston did not carry out all he was expected to do in the way of safeguarding the state.

The defense intimates that some surprises will be sprung, and that Huston will be shown to have done all that could be required of him.

NEGRO SILENCED IN MARYLAND

Disfranchise 45,000 From State and Municipal Elections.

LOOPHOLE FOR BUT FEW

Colored Men Who Own and Pay Taxes on $500 Worth of Property May Be Allowed to Vote—Federal Elections Still Open.

Annapolis, Md., April 4.—The Maryland legislature has disfranchised over 45,000 negroes so far as state and municipal elections are concerned, by the passage of the bills of Delegate W. Mitchell Digges, of Charles county. It is the most sweeping method of disfranchisement that has ever been attempted in any state, and even leading statesmen of the far southern states have expressed a doubt as to its constitutionality. But the scheme is so ingeniously worked out that no real test can be made in the courts until after the next state election.

The bills were passed by both the houses and will be sent to the governor.

There are four bills in all. The first repeals the existing registration laws, the second enacts a new registration measure providing that none but white men shall be registered in the future as voters; the third carries the constitutional amendment designed to restrict registration for all time to the white persons of the state, as it prohibits any future legislation from extending the registration privilege to negroes, except those owning $500 worth of property.

White Vote on Amendment.

This amendment will be voted upon in the fall of 1911 by white men only. A provision has been inserted which will permit the white voters, if they so desire, to extend the privilege of registration and the ballot box to negroes owning and paying taxes on $500 worth of property. It was thought best to insert this provision, as the Democratic leaders desire to shut out only the thriftless and ignorant negroes and are willing to admit to the ballot box those who have sufficient thrift to accumulate $500 worth of property.

This property qualification is thought preferable to an educational qualification, because it is believed that the negro who has accumulated property will prove better worthy of the franchise than the educated negro, who may be weighed with all the shiftlessness of his race.

The fourth bill extends the terms of the mayor and other municipal officers of Baltimore city, so that their successors will be chosen at the November state election, spring elections being abolished. The bills are based upon the assumption that the Fifteenth amendment is void, and it is declared in the preamble that the exercise of the elective franchise by the negro is not consistent with his own best interests as the welfare of the white race.

The present registration books are to be used for the congressional elections this year, and the right of the negro to vote at congressional elections is to remain undisturbed. The first registration will take place for the general election next year, when a governor and legislature and nearly all state officers are to be elected. The method and machinery for the registration of voters will remain practically unchanged, as under existing laws.

Federal Elections Still Open.

The negro is not to be absolutely disfranchised, as he still will vote at federal elections—that is, for congressmen. For use at elections of congressmen a distinct set of registration books will be prepared in 1912, and upon these books the names of all persons entitled to vote for congressmen will be entered. If any state officer is to be elected at the election for congressmen a distinct ballot must be used, and only those persons qualified to vote at state elections will be permitted to vote for them. This will happen at the presidential election in 1912, when both congressmen and electors will be elected. Presidential electors are state officers and would be voted on the state ballot.

The present right of appeal from the decision of officers of registration is retained. It is provided, however, that a person appealing to a court from an officer of registration for registration under the act shall be deemed to have based his right to register upon the act, and shall be estopped to set up any claim or defense on any other ground. This is intended to prevent any appeal to the state courts for claim to register under the federal constitution or laws of congress.

The bills also provide that the right to register shall be limited to white male persons, and if any registrar shall refuse to enforce the provisions of this section, such refusal shall ipso facto vacate a vacation of his office. If the provision of the act restricting the suffrage to whites shall fail or be incapable of taking effect, then every part of the act shall be void.

Mothers Want Bloodless Fourth.

Atlantic City, April 4.—Members of the Atlantic City branch of the Mothers' Congress have gone on record for a "safe" Fourth of July, and petitions are to be sent to Mayor Stoy asking him to enforce the laws against toy pistols and firecrackers.

In sections where the thronds of the woolly aphs are likely to be serious the young fruit tree may be protected by removing the soil for a distance of two or three feet around the tree to the depth of a couple of inches and placing a layer of tobacco stems and leaves or dust. These should be soaked thoroughly and the earth replaced. While the same means may be used to protect the root systems of older trees, the labor involved is greatly increased.

TEN YEARS IN TORTURE

A Wonderful Escape from Torture.

While the Root Juice demonstrations were being conducted at Lafayette, Ind., Mr. A. C. Roberts, a traveling man, rushed into the drug store and grabbed the scientist by the hand and said: "There is no man on earth whom I would rather shake hands with than yourself. Through your great discovery I made a wonderful escape from torment. This world was perfect torture for me for ten years. Every dollar I could rake and scrape I gave to doctors and paid for medicine without anything more than momentary relief. My principal troubles were in my stomach, bowels and back. My kidneys gave me so much trouble I had to get up from ten to fifteen times a night, and if red hot coals were kept on my back I don't believe I would have suffered any more. The doctors said my stomach was lined with gastric ulcers. One bite of solid food would put me in misery. I was dyspeptic, constipated, nervous and all the time, but the first bottle of Root Juice made a wonderful change for the better in my condition. I took about five bottles of the Juice and I don't believe that an angel from heaven could be any happier than I am now. I feel like a new being, both mentally and physically, and will never stop praising Root Juice as long as I live." The Juice has made scores of cures here, as anyone can learn by going to the People's drug store.

Home Course In Domestic Science

III.—Cost of Food In Moderate Homes.

By EDITH G. CHARLTON,
In Charge of Domestic Economy, Iowa State College.

Copyright, 1930, by American Press Association.

It was Ruskin who said, "Sure good is first in feeding people, then in dressing people, then in lodging people and last in rightly pleasing people with arts or science or any other subject of thought."

If Ruskin is right, and we know he is, then it behooves all those who are interested in homemaking and housekeeping to see to it that their duty is well performed; that the results of their labor are not only pleasing good to people, but also making good people. This means improving their physical conditions, training them to higher ideals and truer standards of living. The standard of life will determine the character of the home, and whenever homes and family life are not what civilization and Christianity teach they should be the cause will invariably be found to be wrong standards.

The cost of living depends on the ideas and standards of the persons spending the money, or else it depends on the total disregard for them. The question of how much our living shall cost is more of education than of location, so a scale of expenditures cannot be given that will be suitable in every particular to any locality. Local conditions must be taken into consideration to some extent, though it is generally found that large expenditures in one department of housekeeping can be readily balanced by various economies in another.

Any woman who has a right standard of life will not be satisfied to spend all the income for physical needs. She will want a balance for those things which are termed advantages, education and all those advantages which develop the mental and moral side of the family. It has been repeatedly proved that when the family income is adjusted so as to leave at least 25 percent of it for matters not connected with material living there is contentment in the family circle and a desire among the individual members to reach the highest attainments of true manhood and womanhood. It is not my purpose in this article to attempt to do more than show what proportion of the income should be reserved for food and how that amount can be spent in order to keep within the margin and to satisfy the physical needs of the family.

It has been said that one-half the cost of living is the cost of food, and it has been shown over and over again that it is not the food actually eaten which costs so excessively as it is what is wasted by poor cooking, preparing too large quantities and buying out of season.

Meals at 18 Cents a Day.
An income of from $1,000 to $1,500 should allow no more than 18 to 25 cents a day for each person for food, or not more than 22 percent of the total income. To feed a family of five persons on 90 cents a day, or 18 cents each, requires thought and considerable planning on the part of the housekeeper. But on that amount it is possible to provide good nourishing meals every day and in amount sufficient for all the needs of the body. This is not a mere theoretical statement, for in many homes in this country less than $1 a day is being spent on the table.

To buy wisely on a small margin requires some knowledge of food values, because it is necessary to have the daily meals represent a given amount of protein, fat, sugar and starch, mineral matter and water. These food constituents must be provided every day if the body is to be kept in normal condition.

The question now is, which of these foods can be provided for 18 cents a day for each person? Not those out of season nor quickly perishable nor those brought to the consumer from a distance. Such foods are always expensive and may not contain any more nutrient than foods produced in home markets. For instance, in all inland localities oysters are high priced because they are very

Apples, prunes and figs are recognized by most all diet specialists as mild yet excellent laxatives, and the health of many would be improved were tons and tons more of these fruits consumed.

Those who have looked somewhat into the matter have concluded that the prairie dog does not dig his burrow deep enough to reach a water supply, but gets along on that which he secures from the leaves and roots of the herbage on which he feeds.

perishable and because of the cost of transportation. They are one of the most easily digested foods, eaten raw or when slightly cooked, and they contain considerable nutriment. But as a tissue building food or a meat substitute they are not nearly as valuable as some other articles of the diet. A person would need to eat fourteen oysters to derive a quantity of protein from them equal to that contained in one egg, and one pound of beefsteak is equal in tissue building material to 150 oysters, or about the number contained in three quarts. Thus it readily can be seen that individuals or families may be well fed and never eat an oyster. In providing food on an economical basis the line must sometimes be drawn rather sharply between appetite and hunger.

Prices differ in various localities, and it is impossible to suggest definite menus that everywhere can be provided for a certain sum of money. However, in the greater portion of this country a selection may be made from the following list of food materials by persons living on from 15 to 25 cents a day:

Beef, mutton, pork or any meat not over 20 cents per pound.
Wheat bread, purchased or homemade.
Butter for the table.
Common cereals.
Suet, lard for cooking.
Whole milk.
Dairy cheese.
Dried fruits.
Cabbage, carrots and other vegetables in season.
Cane or beet sugar.
Fish.
Bacon.
Coffee served with hot milk occasionally.
Tea occasionally.
Local fruits in season.

Serving Cheap Materials.

This list of foods can be varied from day to day by the skillful housekeeper and will furnish not only pleasing variety in the meals, but the required nourishment. But when the coarser, cheaper foods are used greater care must be taken in their preparation. Any food, no matter how rare and expensive, can be spoiled by careless or ignorant cooking, and the commonest food material, presenting perhaps few possibilities for a tempting dish, can be made most appetizing by careful preparation and serving. So it all comes back to the original statement that the cost of the table does not depend so much on the price of food materials as it does on the knowledge and skill of the cook or on the lack of those essentials to success.

When the variety of food from which to make a selection is limited it is necessary to know a number of ways in which to serve the same article as it appears on the table day after day. If oatmeal must be the staple breakfast dish five mornings out of seven, try the addition of a handful of dates from which the stones have been removed. Cook the oatmeal thoroughly in a double boiler or fireless cooker and add the dates about half an hour before serving. It will be necessary, too, very often to use the cheaper cuts of meat when the family is living on 18 cents a day, but these are more appetizing if carefully prepared than the expensive steaks or roasts that have been improperly cooked. The following recipes may afford variety in the dinner menu and may suggest to the housekeeper ideas in serving some of the cheaper meats:

Cannelloni of Beef.
Two pounds of lean beef cut from round, grated rind of half a lemon, one tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley, one egg, one-half teaspoonful of onion juice, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, little grated nutmeg, one teaspoonful of salt and one-quarter teaspoonful of pepper. Chop meat finely and add remaining ingredients in order given. Shape in a roll about six inches long, wrap in buttered paper, place in a dripping pan and bake thirty minutes in a moderate oven. Baste every five minutes with one-quarter cup of butter melted in one cup of boiling water. Serve with espagnole sauce.

Esperanto Sauce.
Two tablespoonfuls butter, two tablespoonfuls flour, half a teaspoonful salt, one tablespoonful chopped red pepper or pimiento, cup hot water, three teaspoonfuls worcestershire sauce and a lemon thinly sliced. Melt butter, add flour and salt and, when blended, pour on hot water. Cook thoroughly, stirring until thickened. Then add chopped pepper, worcestershire sauce and, last, the sliced lemon.

Sauce.
Half cup stock, half cup cream, two tablespoonfuls flour, teaspoonful salt, half teaspoonful pepper and tablespoonful capers. Add salt and pepper to flour. Dilute with cold water. Add to stock and stir. Add cream and cook with capers.

Pot Roast.
Two pounds chuck beef. Sear all sides with hot fat. Put in kettle and cover with boiling water. Add half small onion, a cup diced carrots, two tablespoonfuls vinegar and four cloves. Simmer four hours. Serve with raisin sauce.

Emergency Sauce.
Strain liquid in which pot roast was cooked. To two cups add half cup sifted peas and thicken with tablespoonful flour blended with two tablespoonfuls melted butter.

Stew Supreme.
Three pounds veal, half pound lean bacon, three sliced carrots, six small onions, three cloves, blade of mace, salt and pepper to taste, half cup of tomato catchup and tablespoonful of worcestershire sauce. Cut meat into small pieces and brown in butter. Add the vegetables and seasoning and pour over enough boiling water to cover. Let simmer for an hour or until meat is tender. Arrange meat on serving platter, rub sauce and vegetables through a sieve, add the tomato and worcestershire sauces, pour around the veal and serve with small piece of toast.

A poor draft in the stove, making watery eyes and smoky wall paper, may be due to the stove being clogged up with ashes or to defects or breaks in the chimney above the point where the pipe enters. Wherever located, the cause ought to be sought out and removed.

A well known eastern seedsman advertises an "improved wonderberry." It is surely to be hoped that he can fulfill his promise.

REARING CALVES.

Good Care Necessary When Feeding Them Skimmilk.

A little thought given to raising calves on skimmilk would be money in the pocketbook of almost any farmer. A skimmilk diet is artificial, and a calf being raised on it needs more attention for far than one raised by its mother. Calves are more sensitive than one commonly thinks; therefore the milk should always be just the same temperature. A single feed of cold milk will cause indigestion. This is a pretty serious thing with a young calf. No matter how light the attack may be, it will retard the growth of the animal for several days. Stale or sour milk will have a like effect.

The right temperature is 90 degrees. If the milk in warm weather is separated immediately after it comes from the cow it is just about the right temperature without additional heating.

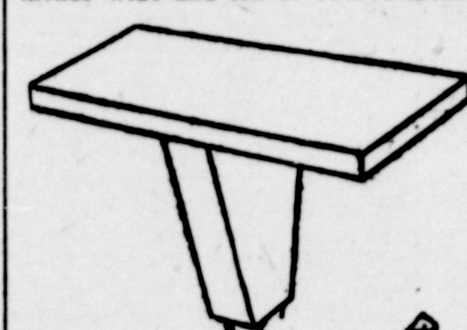

FIVE OF A KIND.

When the weather is cool the milk should be warmed artificially, and a thermometer should be applied to see that something near 90 degrees is reached. The thermometer you use for the church serves. After a calf is two or three months old it is not so sensitive as a younger one and may safely be fed milk that is cooler.

A separator is a valuable asset in raising calves by hand. The skimmilk can be got to the calves sooner after it has been taken from the cows, thus reducing the chance that it may become stale. Don't feed the calves sour milk one day and sweet milk the next, even if the milk in each instance is of the same temperature. The calf that the calf is fed out of should be kept clean. By using a foul pail it is possible to give a calf indigestion.

The most common mistake farmers make in feeding skimmilk is that of overfeeding. One gallon of skimmilk twice a day is enough for any calf, no matter how large it is. A little more can be given to a calf more than three months old without getting over the danger line, but be careful. A calf thrives best when it is hungry. If it bawls once in awhile it is good exercise. A calf can gorge itself on milk from the udder without dire injury, but when it gorges itself on skimmilk it will pay the penalty in suffering and may turn up its hoofs. No more is required because the milk has been skimmed than if it were whole. See that the calf gets just about the same amount each day.

Good Remedy For Blackleg.
Many farmers are complaining of losing stock with blackleg. A good preventive may be found in the following:

Mix together well fourteen quarts of common barrel salt and one and one-half pounds of saltpeter. It is good to use the pulverized saltpeter if possible to get it; if not, purchase the crystal saltpeter and pulverize it thoroughly before mixing. Exercise great care to get it well mixed so that the saltpeter will be evenly distributed through the salt. Place it where the stock can have free access to it.
